Trisha Paytas is an American personality, entrepreneur and author that has amassed an audience of more than 20 million followers across platforms since the mid-2000s. She has helped shape the creator landscape, being one of the first to emerge off YouTube. Embracing monumental life milestones including sobriety, marriage and motherhood, she has cultivated a newfound sense of purpose and garnered a cult-like following of adoring fans over 2 billion views in just the last 12 months.

From lifestyle vlogs and ASMR content to cosplay videos, Trisha has consistently demonstrated her versatility and creativity across all forms of media. Beyond her digital presence, she has expanded her reach by guest starring on more than 50 television shows and films, including "The Tonight Show," "America's Got Talent," "Modern Family," and "Celebrity Big Brother." She also created the podcast "Just Trish," which has amassed more than 50 million streams in its first eight months.

Celebrated for her distinctively offbeat sense of humor and unapologetic nature, Trisha has navigated through a number of adversities in her career to emerge as a beacon of resilience and inspiration, working with brands including Elf Cosmetics, Living Proof, Liquid Death and SeatGeek, among many others. She can most recently be seen in the pages of Rolling Stone, and has been continuously covered by outlets, such as Entertainment Tonight, People Magazine, E! Online, Paper Magazine and Business Insider.

Tana Mongeau is one of the most recognizable voices in digital media today. Rising to fame through her wildly viral YouTube storytimes, she quickly became synonymous with a new kind of celebrity: one that is raw, self-aware and impossible to ignore.

Since then, she's expanded her footprint far beyond social media. She starred in MTV's "No Filter: Tana Turns 21," headlined multiple sold-out tours and built a multifaceted brand that influences online and mainstream culture. Her hit podcast, "Cancelled with Tana Mongeau," was a top-ranking phenomenon, hosting viral guests from Trisha Paytas to Chelsea Handler, and selling out theatres worldwide with its Live Tour.

Now in a new chapter of growth and reinvention, Tana is using her platform to speak openly about sobriety, fame and evolution, without losing any of her candor that made her an internet icon in the first place.
