The sold-out show featured surprise appearances from David Letterman, Fred Armisen and Richard Kind. He recently announced "Mulaney Takes Manhattan," a special nine-show New York City run from January 7-15, 2027, taking Mulaney to nine iconic venues over nine nights, from Comedy Cellar and Blue Note to Carnegie Hall and Radio City Music Hall, culminating in a finale at Madison Square Garden. Last year, Mulaney hosted, wrote and executive-produced the Netflix talk show EVERYBODY'S LIVE WITH JOHN MULANEY. The show served as a continuation of the series EVERYBODY'S IN LA. The series featured monologues, guests, pre-taped sketches, musical segments, and more. EVERYBODY'S IN LA was a six-night live comedy series that explored Los Angeles during the Netflix Is A Joke Festival in 2024. In December 2024, Mulaney starred in the Broadway play "All In: Comedy About Love," alongside a cast that included Armisen, Kind and Renee Elise Goldsberry.

Mulaney, who has hosted SNL six times, can next be seen in the Amazon MGM Studios film MADDEN, an upcoming biographical sports drama directed by David O. Russell and starring Nicholas Cage, coming out later this year.
